bullfightappeals quite openly to a source of power that exists outside the realm of the state, andwhich resides in the landscape of the locality. The difference, however, between the Independence Day presen-tation and the history lessons in schools is that the former uses the experiential andconsensual nature of the ritual to conceal the contingent and partial nature of theparticular connections that its narrative implies.
