Obviously the general economic situation, not to mention the question of university funding, means that this is a difficult time for universities generally, and the decline in the number of students doing Modern Languages at A-level puts Modern Linguists in a particularly vulnerable position, so it is difficult for any of us to talk about the future with a great deal of confidence, but, with that in mind, things seem all right for the moment. It is interesting work, and you get to know a lot of people by correspondence. Ieri, oggi, domani Documentary Himself.
