While it Rights of Students (Point/Counterpoint) absolutely sending a political message, and intentionally so, the root and the inspiration behind the walk-out comes from remembering those who have lost their lives at the hands of mass shootings. Hillsborough County schools make allowances for students on the extreme sides of the academic spectrum, but what about kids in the middle, who fall into a category of apathy? Atfirstglance, thisseemsplausible. It will stifle the UW tradition of peaceful protesting, noble defiance and making history on the right side of history. The government is not in the business of making people listen to you. What is great about walkouts like these is the way they allow students to make their voices truly heard, which can be difficult for minors. Setupagiveaway.If the bill is passed, however, students should seek information on how to protest according to the new regulations. That is why it was scheduled on the anniversary of Columbine.
