When we forget about the local, the micro-neighbourhood, the meso-city-region case study shows how action specifically in the urban sphere can perform these functions, contributing to democratization from a perspective that seeks to increase the sustainability, in the sense of social justice Fainstein human flourishing Friedmann and livability Evansas discussed in chapter 1. This view then, requires looking not at individual participants, as much of the literature on participation does, but rather at citizens and their organizations.
