Between and convicts and their gaolers made up the majority of the population - but after this, a population of emancipated convicts began to grow who could be granted land and these people pioneered a non-government private sector economy and were later joined by soldiers whose military service had expired - and finally, free settlers who began arriving from Britain. The mass unemployment and collapse of commodity prices brought ruin to both city workers and to farmers. You must be logged in to Tag Records.

The First Fleet of 11 vessels carried over a thousand settlers, including convicts. The University of Sydney commenced in 1828. After the settlers saw themselves as a free people and demanded the same rights they would have had in Britain. Successive Governors warned the Colonial Office of the dangers of republicanism if the demands for self-government were not met.
